GLASGOW

AND ITS ENVIRONS

LASGOW is a city, an important commercial sea- and royal burgh, the seat of a university, parlia- tary and municipal borough and the head of a poor bination, sheriff ordinary and small debt courts, r of a presbytery in the synod of Glasgow and Ayr, ated in the county of Lanark, on both banks of the Clyde and about 20 miles south-east from its th, and is 397 miles from London, 44 from Edin- th, 157 from Aberdeen, 34 from Ayr, 29 from ting, 213 from Manchester, 212 from Liverpool, 95 Carlisle, 196 from Dublin and 127 from Belfast.

e river Clyde divides the city into two unequal s, the chief portion occupying the northern bank, communicating with the southern division by means everal bridges. In 1345 the principal street was rate, now a small thoroughfare a little south of the edral, and some small tenements near the head of street once formed part of the town mansion of the family of Montrose; Rotten row, a continuation rygate westwards, was then also one of the chief ts. The famous Saltmarket, a street running nwards from the Cross, was laid out on the forma- of the Society of Fishers, and extends to the Town e; and Fishergate, now called Bridgegate, a narrow t leading from the Saltmarket to Stockwell or oria bridge on the west, was also constructed by society. In the northern portion of the modern , two main lines of streets run east and west, the ternmost of these, near to, and almost parallel with Clyde, is nearly four miles in length and 80 feet ; west of the Cross it is known at different points ongate and Argyle street, at the end of which it es the Kelvin stream; east of the Cross it is nued under the name of Gallowgate. The other ughfare consists of the Great Western road, New road and Cowcadden street, and deflecting south- s is connected by Buchanan street with the central ughfare called George street, prolonged eastwards uke street. The principal street, running from to south, is about a mile in length and 50 feet , and bears successively the names of Castle street, street, High street and the Saltmarket. The point s intersection with the main southern street is . The Cross, and before the population had pro- ed westward was regarded as the nucleus of the The streets between the two chief thoroughfares egularly laid out and of ample width; these include e street, Ingram street, St. Vincent street, George , Buchanan street, the handsomest business street e city, and Sauchiehall street, which runs from nan street westward nearly a mile, and ranks gst the finest streets in the city. Connecting e street with Buchanan street is the Argyle arcade, is covered in by a lofty glass roof, and lined with shops. There is a second arcade in Sauchiehall , called the Wellington, and one from Renfrew in connection with it, called the Victoria; the r (the Covent Garden of Glasgow) is in Candle- street. The old town lies to the east of the ate, extending to the Clyde on the south, and the dral on the north.

river Clyde, in its passage through the city, is d by numerous bridges, the easternmost, at the of the stream to the west, being Rutherglen bridge, Richmond Park foot-bridge, then Govan Street , and lastly, St. Andrew's suspension bridge, which from Glasgow green to McNeil street on the south Some distance lower down, at the foot of the arket, is the Albert bridge, an iron structure d in place of the old Hutchestown bridge, which rly spanned the Clyde at this point. The founda- tone was laid 3 June, 1870, and the bridge was d 21 June, 1871. It consists of three arches of t design, and cost with its adjuncts nearly o. About 160 yards further west the river is crossed by the Glasgow and South Western Railway bridge, rebuilt in 1900, at a cost of £80,000, and consisting of five river spans of 75 feet clear each, and two street spans of 65 feet each, each pier consisting of two granite piers, built on cylindrical concrete foundations, at a depth of 90 feet below high water level, the top of the piers being 30 feet above high water. The Victoria bridge, at the foot of Stockwell street, stands on the site of the "auld brig o' Glasgow," built about 1345, at the joint expense of William Rae, then bishop of Glasgow, and Lady Lochow. The foundation stone was laid 9 April, 1851, by George Augustus, 6th Duke of Atholl, K.T. and the bridge was opened for traffic in 1856; it is built of white granite, and consists of five arches of from 67 to 78 feet in span, the total length being 445 feet and the width 60 feet. Between the Victoria bridge and Glasgow bridge is the Portland Street suspension bridge for foot passengers, with a single span of 420 feet; the chains rest on handsome piers, adorned with cast iron columns of Greek-Ionic character. Glasgow bridge, at the end of Jamaica street, and connecting it with Bridge street on the south bank, is an elegant structure of seven arches, and practically a replica of a former bridge, erected from the designs of Thomas Telford. It was completed and opened 25th May, 1899, at a cost of about £100,000; it is of polished granite, and is 500 feet in length and 80 in breadth, being 20 feet wider than the old bridge, with a roadway of 50 feet. The Caledonian Railway bridge, which crosses the river 115 feet west from Glasgow bridge, was erected at a cost of about £80,000, and has five spans of 110, 166, 200, 178 and 66 feet respectively, starting from the north side. The piers, sunk to a great depth, are formed of concrete cased in iron, with granite above the low water level; there is a clear waterway at high tide of 32 feet. The height of the girders across the piers on the river is 21 feet and across the streets 11 feet. Beyond this bridge ferries are maintained at the various quays and at the Queen's docks. Under the control of the Clyde Navigation Trustees, a body of elected members, the Clyde has been considerably improved for navigation. The river between the quays on either bank has been widened, and is progressively deepened by means of dredging machines, so that ships of upwards of 1,000 tons burthen can now discharge at the Broomielaw on the north bank. The mud raised by the machines is conveyed down the Clyde in hopper barges to a point 3 miles south-south-west of Garroch Head. Diving bells are also employed as an accessory to the dredging operations. The 12th of March, 1782, was memorable for the extraordinary height of the tide here, on which occasion the Clyde rose upwards of 20 feet above its usual mark and completely insulated the village of Gorbals.

The noble quays extending from Glasgow bridge westward afford altogether over 45,000 lineal feet of quay wall, and it is here that the vessels by which this part of the river is crowded discharge and take in their cargoes. The Queen's Dock, which is considerably lower down, on the north bank, and was originally known as the Stobcross Dock, was opened on the 19th September, 1877. It covers an area of 58½ acres, and has 3,334 yards of quayage, and an average depth of 20 feet. The entire cost of the work was £1,360,000, including the entrance and swing bridge. The North quay, 983 yards in length, is equipped for the shipment of coal and discharge of iron ore and other minerals. The other quays are furnished with goods sheds, 60 feet in width. The dock has rail connection with the Caledonian and North British railway systems. Kingston Dock, on the south side of the river, was opened in 1867; it has an area of 4⅝ acres and 779 yards of quays, width of entrance 52 feet, depth 18 feet at low water. The greater portion of the quayage is provided with goods sheds 50 and 60 feet in width. The Prince's Dock, at Govan, opened by H.M. King George V. then Duke of York, 10th September, 1897, has a water area of 35 acres, a quay area of 39¾ acres, and quayage of 3,737⅓ yards frontage. The dock is connected by rail with the General Terminus station of the Caledonian Railway, into which the North British and Glasgow and South-Western Railways also run; it has also a special direct connection by the Prince's Dock Railway with the three railway systems. The South quay is equipped with hydraulic hoist and steam travelling crane for the shipment of coal, and with cranes for the discharge of ore. General cargo is dealt with at the other quays, which are furnished with goods sheds, for the most part two storeys in height. There are three graving docks at Govan, the last of which was opened 27 April, 1898. This dock, commenced in 1890, is 880 feet long, with a width at the entrance of 83 feet, in the body of the dock at the bottom of 81⅔ feet, and a width at the top of 115 feet. The depth of water on the sill is 26½ feet. The Dock is divided by steel gates into an outer length of 460 feet, and an inner length of 420 feet. The cost was about £270,000, and the coping stone was also laid by H.M. King George V. then Duke of York, 10th Sept. 1897. Fishing boats and their implements, belonging to Glasgow port, are distinguished by the letters "G. W." Rothesay Dock, Clydebank, 6 miles below Glasgow, is included in Glasgow harbour, and was opened on 25th April, 1907, by H.M. King George V. then Prince of Wales. It is a mineral dock and is provided with four hoists and one travelling crane for the shipment of coal, and 23 cranes for the discharge of ore; water area, 20½ acres; quay area, 40 acres; width of entrance, 200 feet; quayage, 2,045 yards.

The Forth and Clyde Canal, begun 10 June, 1768, under the direction of John Smeaton, the celebrated engineer, and opened 28 July, 1790, has its eastern termination at Grangemouth, about 10 miles south-east from Stirling, and through which port sea-going vessels of about 80 tons burthen can pass to Glasgow or to the Firth of Clyde and places beyond. The locks are 20 feet wide and 74 feet long, admitting vessels about 68½ feet in length, and little under 20 feet in breadth. Vessels drawing up to 8 feet 6 inches can pass through the canal between the Firth of Clyde and the Firth of Forth, and in the river Carron, between the port and the Firth of Forth, there is about 20 feet of water at spring and 15 feet at neap tides. For the accommodation of vessels too large to enter the canal, capacious wet docks and other works have been provided at Grangemouth, on the estuary of the Forth. These docks are situated at the eastern entrance of the canal, so that timber can be cheaply transported by water to or from Glasgow and the west of Scotland. The new or Grange Dock, opened 8 Oct. 1906, is directly connected by a large entrance lock with the Firth of Forth, and the whole of the shipping now passes into the docks by this lock, which is 625 feet long and 80 feet wide, with a depth of water on the sill of 31 feet 9 inches at high water ordinary spring tides, and of 27 feet 9 inches at high water ordinary neap tides. Forty hydraulic cranes, raising from two to five tons each, are provided for the rapid discharge of timber and other merchandise, and there are 45 acres of water, forming a timber pond for the storage of square timber, and a very large area of ground for the storage of deals and battens and a continuous system of railways around the docks provides communication with all parts of Scotland. The total length of the canal is 35 miles, its western entrance being at Bowling, a little east of Dumbarton, on the north bank of the Clyde. The Glasgow section, which branches off at Maryhill, about 1½ miles north of the city, takes a winding course through the northern suburbs, and includes, or is connected with, a number of wharves and basins; at Monkland basin it joins the Monkland Canal, opened 30 Nov. 1792, and runs to Coat-bridge. The riverside quayage at Glasgow extends to 9,220 lineal yards of frontage, and for the most part is provided with goods sheds. Special berths, with ample storage ground adjoining, are devoted to the timber trade; cattle are landed at Merklands riverside quay, where there is extensive lairage accommodation; while at Meadowside quay there is a large granary, capable of storing about 1¼ million bushels, and equipped with grain discharging and conveying plant of latest design. The wharf at Renfrew harbour, 158 yards in length, is included in Glasgow harbour and is part of the Clyde Navigation undertaking.

The railways converging on Glasgow are the Caledonian, the North British, the Glasgow and South-Western, the Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock joint line, and the Glasgow and Paisley joint line. The chief passenger stations in Glasgow are the Caledonian Central station, Gordon street, Buchanan Street station, head of Buchanan street and Eglinton street; the North British, Queen street; Glasgow and South-Western, St. Enoch square; Glasgow, Barrhead and Kilmarnock (joint line), St. Enoch square; Glasgow and Paisley (joint), Gorbals, Strathbungo and Crossmyloof and Central, Gordon street (Caledonian). The Glasgow District Subway, constructed in 1890-96, under the direction of Messrs. Simpson & Wilson, engineers, consists of two parallel tunnels, taking a circular route of 6½ miles, and including within their circumference part of the north-western district of Glasgow, portions of the burghs of Partick, Govan and Kinning Park, and a large part of the south-western area of the city. Commencing at St. Enoch square, the route goes up Buchanan street, through Cowcaddens to the Cross at the Established Church Normal School, under New City road and Great Western road to Kelvin Bridge, under the Kelvin and the hill at Hillhead to Byars road, down Byars road to Partick Cross, along Dumbarton road westward, and through Partick in a southerly direction, when a descent is made to pass under the river at Govan Ferry. Then an ascent is made to Govan Cross, from which the route is continued through Broomloan and Summertown to Walmer crescent on Paisley road, and thence eastwards through Kinning Park, past Shields road to the joint depot at West street, and from that point turns north-east, so as to pass under Eglinton street. Here a turn is made northward, and a descent is necessary in order to pass under the river at Custom House quay, from which the lines ascend to the starting point at St. Enoch square. Each of the two tunnels is 11 feet in diameter, and they are constructed between three and six feet apart. There are 15 stations on the route. The power station is on the south side of Scotland street, and the trains are worked by steel wire cables, one cable going round the entire circle for the one track, and the other rope, travelling in an opposite direction, similarly going round the second circle.

The Glasgow Central Railway, part of the Caledonian system, of which the eastern section was opened for passenger traffic on November 1st, 1895, extends from the Caledonian station easterly to Glasgow Cross, and terminates at Rutherglen, where it joins the main line.

Regular and frequent communication by steam boats is maintained with Liverpool, Cork, Limerick, Galway, Dublin, Belfast, Londonderry, the Western and Northern Highlands, and all parts of the British coast.

The Clyde Tunnels: In 1895 three tunnels, each 16 feet in diameter, were bored under the Clyde from the west of Finnieston street to Mavis Bank, Govan, on the west of the city, at a cost of over £250,000, by the Harbour Tunnel Co., two for vehicular traffic, and the central one for passengers, but the latter is not now (1921) in use. The tunnels have now been leased by the Corporation, and they are free to vehicular and passenger traffic.

COMMERCE, TRADE, AND MANUFACTURES.

Fishing was the earliest branch of productive industry established in Glasgow, and the Society of Fishers, who, about 1345, laid out Bridegate, then called Fishergate, appears to have been the first commercial company established in the city—fish, chiefly salmon, then being the staple of its trade. Cured salmon was exported in large quantities to France, and different French productions were taken in exchange. In 1667 a whale fishing company was formed and a soap factory was established, but the commercial prosperity of this city may be dated from its embarkation in the Virginian tobacco trade.

The commerce of Glasgow was at first carried on in vessels chartered from English ports, although it is on record that this city was in possession of shipping prior to the year 1546, and in the reign of Charles II. the "Leon" privateer was equipped here for a cruise against the Dutch. It was not until the year 1718, however, that a ship built on the Clyde, and the property of Glasgow citizens, crossed the Atlantic. At that time a good supply of tobacco was brought to this market, and the merchants here were enabled to dispose of the article upon more advantageous terms than those of London and other commercial towns in England, a result which produced great international animosity, and led the English tobacco merchants to charge those of Glasgow with frauds on the revenue. An enquiry was eventually made before Parliament, in consequence of which various restrictions were imposed on the trade, and until 1735 it declined, but subsequently revived, and at length obtained such a degree of prosperity for several years previous to the American war (1775-1815) that the annual imports of tobacco into the Clyde were from 55,000 to 44,000 hogsheads; in the year immediately preceding that disastrous war 57,143 hogsheads were imported. From 1,200 to 1,300 hogsheads only of the annual import were sold for home consumption—indeed this trade, at that period, engrossed nearly the whole available capital and commercial enterprise of Glasgow.

The merchants and manufacturers of Glasgow, their intercourse with America being interrupted by the war in 1775, introduced the muslin trade, and prosecuted it with the greatest spirit and success. Early in the present century, the high price paid for the embroidery of muslins enabled thousands of young women in Ayrshire to earn a living by what is still termed "Ayrshire needle work." Later, this industry was extended to the North of Ireland, especially Belfast, but Glasgow still remains the chief seat of this manufacture. On the application of steam power to cotton spinning in 1792, the stimulus thus afforded to the cotton trade and manufactures in Glasgow largely helped to increase its wealth and advance its prosperity, and almost all varieties of textile manufacture are now carried on here.

The iron trade also has long been one of the staple industries of Glasgow, and its close proximity to the iron field gives it in this respect a material advantage. The Glasgow Exchange is the scene of sale for this vast manufacture, and the Clyde ports are principally those of shipment.

In shipbuilding, Glasgow deservedly holds a high position. Its building yards are both numerous and extensive, and the vessels constructed here, whether of timber, iron or steel, have attained a widespread celebrity. 40 vessels, with a tonnage of 112,393 tons, having been built in 1918.

TRADE OF THE PORT.

The customs revenue collected in Glasgow was as follows:—In 1890, £1,049,158; 1892, £1,134,012; 1893, £1,160,660; 1894, £1,225,670; 1895, £1,685,593 15s. 4d.; 1896, £1,668,836 6s. 2d.; 1898, £1,748,822 11s. 9d.; 1902, £1,042,169; 1903, £1,553,613; 1904, £1,446,729; 1905, £1,409,577; 1906, £1,377,329; 1907, £1,339,533; 1908, £1,312,143; 1909, £1,296,077; 1913, £1,433,507; 1915, £1,991,638; 1916, £3,240,888; 1917, £3,130,692; 1918, £3,969,880, and in 1919, £7,240,374.

The imports are: sugars, rum, wines, brandy, timber, cotton, corn, fruit, leather, petroleum, tobacco &c. and numberless other productions of the western world, particularly from Demerara, the Caraccas, Buenos Ayres, the United States, Canada, Nova Scotia &c. The local commercial transactions likewise extend to the coasts of Asia and Africa, and are of considerable consequence in many of the ports of Europe.

The quantities and value of the principal articles imported in 1919 were: Barley, 1,539,800 cwts., £1,542,196; beans (not fresh, other than haricot beans), 60,700 cwts., £70,438; maize, 1,608,900 cwts., £1,293,959; oats, 275,700 cwts., £272,038; peas, 2,510 cwts., £6,775; rye, 368,430 cwts., £377,145; wheat, 4,370,400 cwts., £4,356,135; wheat meal and flour, 4,119,700 cwts., £5,975,165; oatmeal, groats and rolled oats, 91,969 lbs., £141,755; rice, rice meal and flour, 60,920 cwts., £83,801; bacon, 581,079 cwts., £5,207,893; hams, 331,431 cwts., £2,841,439; cheese, 92,158 cwts., £694,157; lard, 129,939 cwts., £1,151,059; oranges, 350,028 cwts., £673,035; raw apples, 396,371 cwts., £931,823; grapes (raw), 96,558 cwts., £263,980; fruit (preserved with or without sugar, not dried), 46,099 cwts., £120,422; sugar (glucose), 135,168 cwts., £265,016; (molasses) 265,016 cwts., £178,243; spirits (brandy), 57,860 proof gallons, £46,604; manufactured cork, 908,604 lbs., £62,204; paper of all kinds, 228,500 cwts., £434,158; iron ore, 872,892 tons, £2,040,049; petroleum, 83,350,008 gallons, £2,380,715; ros… 223,265 cwts., £445,019; leather, 130,505 cw… £1,445,068; unmanufactured tobacco, 21,326,368 lb… £2,371,716; sawn wood, 182,490 loads, £2,556,997; w… (sheep or lambs'), 1,029,932 lbs., £117,130. The city is governed by a Lord Provost (who is styled Right Honourable), twenty bailies, a treasurer, a lhe of the River and the Firth of Clyde and his oute, a master of works, 111 councillors—three for ch of the 37 wards into which the city is divided—dean of guild and a deacon convener, who are mbers of the council by virtue of their offices. The ncipal officers connected with the Corporation are town clerk, city chamberlain, city architect, and curator fiscal. There are also two other bodies that ercise municipal privileges—the Merchants' House d the Trades' House. The dean of guild belongs to d is nominated by the former, and the deacon conr to the latter house, by which he is appointed. illustrative of the onerous and varied duties that olve upon the municipal authorities, it may be ted that the Corporation administers, solely or in t. 20 distinct trusts, that the united annual revenue these is in excess of a million and a quarter, and t the debts affecting these amount to more than 000,000. The Corporation has also either complete partial control of the financial affairs connected with erous charitable foundations and schools.

The police are under the direction of the Town Counc and there are eleven police districts. There are eral courts held within the jurisdiction of the city, chief of which are the following:—The Dean of ild Court, usually held every alternate Thursday, at en o'clock, takes cognizance of buildings and streets. Police Courts, of which there are ten, sit every rning at 9 o'clock. The Sheriff Small Debt Court, debts not exceeding £20, sits every Monday, dnesday and Thursday. The Justice of Peace Small t Court, for the Lower Ward of Lanarkshire, meets ry Monday morning at 11, in the County Hall, decide claims of £5 and under. The River Bailie rt, which is also one of the Police Courts, sits ry day, and has marine jurisdiction between Glasgow dge and the Cloch, near the mouth of the Clyde. Sheriff Ordinary Court sits every Monday, Tuesday, dnesday, Thursday and Friday, and adjudicates on ses of any amount, however large. The Sheriff eal Court sits on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and day, at 11 o'clock.

There are two gaols, one in Duke street, and the other Barlinnie in the outskirts of the city. The Justiciary Sheriffs Criminal Courts are held in a commanding ge of buildings, with its frontage towards the river, r the Victoria Bridge; there is a noble portico in the re, composed of a double row of fluted columns. The justiciary halls are in the centre and are arranged h the requisite conveniences for a court of justice.

nder the "Reform Act, 1832" (2 and 3 William IV. 5), Glasgow returned only two members to Parliat; by the "Scotch Reform Act of 1868" the number increased to three, and, under the "Redistribution Seats Act, 1885" (48 and 49 Vict. c. 23), the city extended and divided into seven parliamentary sions, each returning one member to the Imperial liament. By the "Representation of the People Act, ," the number of divisions was further increased ifteen, each returning one member.

he city is lighted with gas from extensive works nging to the Corporation, who have expended 384,210 on this department, as well as £3,057,241 on tric lighting. Both the city and adjoining burghs supplied with water of remarkable excellence, ved from Loch Katrine, in the Highlands of Perthe, 34 miles distant. The great work by which this accomplished was carried out during the period 5-9, under the superintendence of Mr. Bateman C.E. at a cost of over £1,500,000. The aqueduct from lake to the service reservoir at Mugdock, Dumbarhire, which holds 500,000,000 gallons, is 26 miles , and consists chiefly of tunnels, besides 4 miles ron piping carried across valleys. The cost of the educt averaged £18,000 per mile. Under an Act of additional works were commenced, the aqueduct duplicated and a new reservoir constructed to 700,000,000 gallons; eight water mains, each of inches diameter, run from the service reservoirs he city, and the supply to the south of the river le has been augmented by the laying of several s of 24 and 27 inches in diameter. The resources he works have been increased to the extent of 12 million gallons per day by impounding the ers of Loch Arklet and turning them by means tunnel into Loch Katrine. This additional supply was brought into operation in 1914. The present supply amounts to 72,500,000 gallons daily. The capital of the undertaking is fully £4,600,000, whereof nearly £2,000,000 have been repaid by the operation of sinking funds. The City Improvement Trust was created in 1866, having for its object the purchase of buildings (especially old buildings), taking them down, opening up new streets in densely and ill-built localities, and in a great part reconstructing the old portions of the city, a special tax being imposed for the carrying out of the necessary operations. The trustees have in the course of their proceedings acquired property to the extent of nearly £2,000,000.

ECCLESIASTICAL.

The original see of Glasgow, which stood next in point of antiquity to that of St. Andrews, is said to have been founded c. A.D. 550-60 by St. Kentigern, more commonly called St. Mungo, who afterwards, on account of persecution, fled into Wales and established a monastery at St. Asaph, but in A.D. 573 returned to Glasgow, and there settled till his death, c. 601. St. Mungo is stated to have been the first bishop, but the extant record of the occupants of this see begins with John, Lord Chancellor of Scotland, who was bishop from 1115. The see, originally of great extent, was somewhat diminished on the formation, in 1633-4, of the see of Edinburgh: in 1483 it was raised to the dignity of an archbishopric, but the see was wholly abolished soon after the Revolution of 1688. The cathedral of St. Mungo, a venerable, stately and magnificent building, occupies an elevated site on the brink of a ravine, at the foot of which once flowed a small stream called the Molendinar, and as the descent of the ground eastward is considerable, the eastern portion of the church has been designed on a plan unique, at any rate in this country, and may be described as having a double choir, the choir proper being reared upon a magnificent sub-structure, generally known as the "lower church." The original wooden church was destroyed by fire; but during the episcopate of Bishop John Achaius (1115-47) the building of a new cathedral was begun, and continued, with some mishaps, by his successors, and especially Bishop Jocelyn (1175-99), and the lower church, as appears from an inscription over the doorway, was dedicated 6 July, 1197; of this Transitional work only a fragment is now left, constituting part of the western portion of the south aisle of the lower church: it includes a Transitional shaft and vaulting of the same date, and was probably the eastern termination of this aisle as first built. The choir and lower church, erected by Bishop William de Bondington, are elegant Early English, and were erected during the period 1235-60; but the chapter house and sacristy, though forming part of the design, were not built till much later; the nave, transepts, and the tower and spire are Decorated, the work extending from 1260 to 1350, and the tracery therefore varying from Geometrical to Curvilinear; between 1408 and 1446 the square three-storied building at the north-east angle was built; the basement, on a level with the lowest portion of the lower church, forms the chapter house; the first floor, similarly placed with reference to the choir, is the sacristy, and the upper floor has a gabled roof; to John Cameron, bishop 1426-46, the tower is attributed, but the open quatrefoiled parapet and the spire belong to a later period; Robert Blackader, the first archbishop of Glasgow (1483-1508), and the last prelate who added to the fabric, erected, about 1490, the vaulted aisle projecting from the south transept, supposed by some to be simply the undercroft for an intended extension of that transept; he also added the altars in front of the rood screen, and altered the porches leading from the transept to the lower church; there was at one time a north-west tower, 125 feet high, erected before 1480, and surmounted by an eight-gabled spire covered with lead; corresponding to this, at the south-west angle, stood a building used before 1440 as a library and court house, in which the consistory court was held: both these structures, however, were removed in 1846. The cathedral, as now standing, consists of the lower church of ten bays, comprising central and side aisles; beyond this, reached by a descent of eight steps, an eastern aisle of two bays, leading to the chapter house, and on the south side, the Blackader aisle of four bays; over the lower church is the choir of five bays, with aisles, triforium and clerestory, and a corresponding eastern aisle or ambulatory, with a descent of four wide steps, and leading to the sacristy; the shallow transepts have double flights of steps conducting to the lower church, and there is a nave of eight bays with aisles, triforium and clerestory, and a central tower of two stages, rising 30 feet above the roof, with quatrefoiled parapet and dwarf pinnacles, and an octagonal spire, 225 feet in height, surrounded by pinnacles at the base, and relieved by dormer lights and two quatrefoiled bandings; in the tower is one bell: the old bell, cast in 1594, and recast in 1790, and formerly in the north-west tower, was taken down in 1896, and is now preserved in the chapter house; the total length of the cathedral, by exterior measurement, is slightly less than 300 feet, and the breadth 76 feet; the nave is, internally, 124 feet long and 85 feet high, and the choir, excluding the eastern aisle, is 92 feet long, with a height of 90 feet. In 1613 a grant was made by the Crown (21 Dec.) in connection with a charter to the city, for the support of the fabric, and about 1615, Archbishops Spottiswoode and Law made substantial repairs to the roofing; in 1641 (7 Nov.) another Crown grant, similar to the preceding, was made, and there had also been for about a century a nominal grant of about £55 a year for repairs, but the preferential charges on this grant rendered it practically valueless; after the Revolution of 1688 and the establishment of Presbyterianism, the interior was divided into three churches, and a wall built up separating the nave and choir, the latter being occupied as the Inner Church and the nave as the Outer Church, the lower church being assigned to Barony parish. In the years 1800-4 the choir was refitted and other changes made, under the direction of Mr. Stark, architect; galleries were then erected round three sides of the choir, which was also reseated, and a high pew for distinguished persons set up at the west end; the lower church, up to this time used as a place of worship by the Barony parish, was converted into a burial place, filled with banked-up earth, the windows blocked, and the magnificent vaulting painted black; for the carrying out of this work, much of it inflicting serious injury on the fabric, a grant of £400 appears to have been made by the Treasury. In 1824 the Government employed Mr. Reid, architect, to make a survey of the cathedral, and on his recommendation a sum of nearly £4,000 was expended, chiefly on the choir, the whole of the internal masonry, including the vaulting, being repaired or renewed; and in 1835 the lower church was cleared of the mould accumulated in it and the windows reopened, under the superintendence of Mr. Nixon. During the period 1840-50, and subsequently, the Corporation, with the co-operation of the Treasury, and the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, undertook a further and more extensive renovation, carried out by Mr. Edward Blore D.C.L., F.R.S., F.S.A. architect, at a cost of over £16,000, in the course of which the nave roof was renewed in plaster in a semi-hexagonal form, some of the principal windows repaired and the flooring relaid, and the cathedral was reopened for public worship at the close of March, 1856. In 1911 the cathedral was entirely re-roofed. In more recent years the whole of the windows, including those of the lower church, and excepting only the clerestories, have been filled with stained glass, almost entirely of the Munich School; the west window was executed at Munich in 1859, and those in the nave generally represent Old Testament subjects, the choir windows being arranged to illustrate the teaching of Our Lord; the cost of the glass in the four lancets in the eastern gable was defrayed by Parliamentary grant; the galleries erected at the beginning of the 19th century have also been wholly removed, the communion table placed on the site of the ancient high altar, and the space around it paved with marble. The lower church, commonly, but incorrectly, styled the "crypt," is entered from the graveyard on the south side by a recessed moulded arch, approached by five steps and flanked by acutely pointed arches, all having slender shafts and carved caps, and there is a similar porch on the north side; the total interior length is nearly 130 feet, the main portion, or about 90 feet of its length from the west end, being divided into three aisles by arcades of nine arches on alternately large and small piers; in the centre aisle are other piers carrying the main area of the choir above, and the constantly varying plan and design of the piers and their capitals, the endless change in effect produced by their grouping, as seen from different points, and the intricate and elaborate character of the groining in the vaulting alone, is wonderful to a degree, and is indeed the great glory of the church; nearly in the centre, and raised on two steps, is the reputed tomb of St. Mungo, but considered by some authorities as intended for Bishop Jocelyn; the general height of the lower church is about 12 feet, but the eastern ambulatory, to which there is a descent of eight steps, has a height of 20 feet; this portion of the lower church forms, from north to south, a double aisle of four bays, and the three central piers are united to those of the east end by solid walls forming chapels; the central wall is pierced by an arch, under which lies the effigy of Bishop Robert Wishart, who was here buried c. 1316; and the other two have rich trefoil-headed openings, with piscinæ and credences; at the south end is St. Mungo's well, now inside the building, and also another altar; on the east side of the chapter house is a canopied seat for the dean, with an inscription above it. Archbishop Blackader's aisle, reached by the flights of steps from the transept, is similarly divided into two aisles by clustered piers, with foliaged caps; the vaulting is profusely groined and adorned with richly carved bosses; the eastern aisle or ambulatory of the choir, sometimes also called the "lady chapel," contains, at the south-east angle, a solitary monument, to Archbishop Law (1615-33); the space around the communion table is enclosed, and has a reredos at the east end, stalls on either side, and a pulpit at the north-west corner; the rest of the choir is filled with pews and benches, and across the west end is a gallery, supported on coupled columns, immediately adjoining which, westward, stands the ancient rood screen, an elaborate structure 30 feet in breadth, on the west side, and 10 feet in thickness, with interior stairs; the entrance, reached by a flight of five steps from the nave, consists of a low segmental archway, and the space on either side is relieved by arched panelling; a boldly projecting moulded cornice surmounts the whole and carries seven pairs of grotesque figures, serving as corbels to support as many crocketed buttress pinnacles dividing the beautiful open traceried parapet; on either side of the steps stands an altar with arcaded front, and flanking these are the descents to the lower church, also enclosed by open traceried fencing, destroyed at the Reformation, but renewed about 1850. In the north transept is a monument to Dr. Chrystal (1830), and in the south transept another to Sir James Watson, Kt. provost of Glasgow, 1871-4, d. 1890; in the south aisle of the nave is the only brass now extant in Scotland; it is 6 feet long by 3 feet 2 in. wide, and commemorates six knights of the house of Minto, the date being 1608; at the west end of the nave are memorials to Andrew Cochrane, 1777, Lieut. John Stirling, 1829, and the Hon. Henry Cadogan, lieut.-col. 71st Regiment, slain at Vittoria, 21st June, 1813; and outside the south aisle is a fine monument, in two stages, to Thomas Hutcheson, 1641, partially blocking the window against which it is placed; the south-west porch, next this tomb, is constructed between two of the canopied buttresses and has a good recessed archway of four orders, and a square entrance, with carved work in the tympanum; the west doorway, 17 by 11 feet, is considerably earlier than the rest of the nave, and consists of a double portal of six quasi-shafted orders, with a square head to each entrance, the space above being filled with niches; the great west window, once built up, was repaired and furnished with new stone work in 1812, from a design by Mr. David Hamilton, and displays a fine traceried roundel in the head; the western gable, as well as the aisles, is flanked by strong buttresses rising into richly crocketed pinnacles, all these having been rebuilt and extended on the removal, in 1846, of the north-west tower and consistory house.

In addition to the Cathedral there are nine churches known as the City churches, which belong to the Corporation, with the exception of the Cathedral, which is the property of the Crown. The stipends of the city clergy are £425 per annum, paid out of the Common Good, but that of the Inner High Church is considerably more, and is provided from the teinds. These churches are Blackfriars, The Tron, St. Andrew's, St. David's, St. Enoch's, St. George's, St. James's, St. John's,, and St. Paul's, all with districts formed out of the original City parish. Blackfriars Church, in Denistoun, opened in 1877, was built in place of the Old College or Blackfriars Church, in High street, erected in 1699, on the site of the ancient monastic Church of the Black Friars, with whom Edward I. once resided for a week. The old College Church belonged partly to the University, and the professors and students assembled within it for worship until 1837, when the site was acquired by the N.B. and S.W. Railways; the College was removed to Gilmore hill in 1870, and the College Church east to Westercraigs in 1876, when the older name of "Blackfriars" was assumed. The Tron, or Laigh Church, near the Cross, was erected in 1794, in place of the earlier church, St. Mary and St. Anne, erected in or about the year 1523, and is a plain building of stone, surmounted by a cupola; the tower, of four storeys, projects from it across the pavement of the street, and is there carried on lofty open arches; it has an open parapet with pinnacles and an octagonal spire with dormer lights, built in 1637, and contains a clock and 2 bells. The name of the "Tron" was applied to this church from a part of its steeple having been used as a weigh house. St. Andrew's Church, in the square of the same name, was completed in 1756, at an expense of £26,000, and is an edifice in the Renaissance style, from the designs of Mr. Mungo Nasmyth, architect. St. Enoch's Church, in St. Enoch square, was originally erected in 1780, from designs by Mr. Jaffray, but the existing structure, with the exception of the steeple, was built in the early part of the present century, from the designs of Mr. David Hamilton, architect, and is a rectangular edifice of stone, in the Classic style. The front has a portico, with columns of the Doric order. St. George's Church, in Buchanan street, was erected in 1807 at a cost of £9,000, and is a handsome edifice of stone, in the Classic style, with three-quarter Doric columns in front, rising to the whole height of the church. The steeple, 180 feet in height, is crowned with a dome and five obelisk-shaped pinnacles. St. John's Church, in Græme street, was built during the residence here of Dr. Chalmers (c. 1814-19), and affords 1,600 sittings. St. Paul's Church was built by the Town Council in 1835 at a cost of £8,000, to take the place of the outer church, services up to that time having been held in the nave of the Cathedral. St. David's Church, at the end of Candleriggs street, is a cruciform edifice, in the Gothic style, from the designs of Messrs. Rickman and Hutchinson, architects, of Birmingham, and includes a tower 120 feet high, and a spacious vaulted crypt beneath. The cost of the church was £7,000, but the sepulchres in the crypt sold for £4,000. Apart from the city churches there are many churches in the city connected with the Establishment which are self-supporting. The extensive Barony parish had as its parish church the lower church or crypt of the Cathedral from the time of the Reformation, until in 1798 a separate church was built contiguous to the Cathedral, from a design by Mr. Adam; from 1801 to 1835 the parish appropriated the lower church of the Cathedral as a burial ground by filling a part of it with earth, and blocking the windows; but in 1899 the church was rebuilt, and numerous ecclesiastical parishes have been formed out of the Barony. The Church of the parish of Gorbals, in Carlton place, between the Jamaica Street and Stockwell Street bridges, was erected or completed in 1810, from designs by Mr. David Hamilton, architect, and is an edifice in the Renaissance style, with a rusticated basement, and columns of the Doric order in the centre, and projecting therefrom is a tower supported on columns, and corresponding pilasters at the angles, and terminating in a well proportioned spire, 174 feet high; the sides of the building are finished with an entablature and balustrading; the principal windows being ornamented with trussed pilasters and a frieze and cornice. This church was for many years rented to a Free Church Congregation, but it again reverted to the Establishment about 1860, and the patronage of the living is with heritors and feuars by purchase. Gorbals Parish at one time formed part of the Parish of Govan, but was disjoined in the year 1771. It was combined with Govan for poor law purposes on 15th May, 1873, and now forms part of the Govan Combination. The Roman Catholic body is represented by the Archdiocese of Glasgow, founded in 1492, but vacant between the years 1603 and 1878; it comprises the counties of Lanark, Dumbarton, Renfrew, part of Ayr, part of Stirlingshire, and the Cumbrae isles.

For full list of all places of worship, with the clergy, see pages 499 to 503.

Cemeteries.—The Necropolis, situated immediately east of the Cathedral, was formed in 1829-30, and is approached by a lofty bridge, crossing the valley through which runs the Molindinar stream, and rather appropriately called the "Bridge of Sighs." The grounds are beautified with shubberies, trees, flowers, and gravel walks, and thickly adorned with monumental columns, statues, and other memorials. The other cemeteries in Glasgow and its suburbs are:—The Southern Necropolis, in Caledonia Road; Cathcart Cemetery; New Cathcart Cemetery, three miles south of Glasgow; Craigton Cemetery, in Paisley road; Dalbeth, in London road; Lambhill Cemetery, in Balmore road, Maryhill; Sandymount, Shettleston and Sighthill Cemetery, Springburn road. The Glasgow Crematorium and Chapel, within the Western Necropolis of Glasgow at Maryhill, were erected by the Scottish Burial Reform and Cremation Society Limited, at a cost of about £2,900, from plans by Mr. James Chalmers I.A. architect, and formally opened Nov. 26, 1895. The chapel is cruciform, with chancel, and the west front has three lancet windov The chancel, slightly elevated, has two richly-mould windows in the gable. The interior is furnished wi seats and a stone pulpit. Below the chapel is a vault crypt, and considerably in rear of it are two incinerati chambers. The offices of the Society are at 142 Vincent street, Glasgow.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The Municipal Buildings, in George square, the fou dation stone of which was laid October 6th, 1883, by t Lord Provost, were opened by Her late Majesty Que Victoria in Aug. 1888, and form an extensive qu rangular structure in the Italian Renaissance style, t main or western front of which, facing the square, 246 feet in length, the town clerk's department occu ing the ground and first floors, extending from entrance in George square half way along the Cochra street elevation. The rooms in the opposite portion the George square front are set apart for the chamb lain's and finance departments, and in the John str portion of the building accommodation is found for gas and water departments. Facing Cochrane stre and entering from the south-east corner of the qu rangle, is the public works office. Buildings properties adjoining were acquired in 1912 with a view to extension of the buildings, and in the same year Parliam authorised additional borrowing powers to the ext of £200,000 for the carrying out of the extension the furnishing and equipment thereof. Designs for extended buildings, which were estimated to cost o £130,000, were approved by the Corporation September, 1913, and the memorial stone was laid His Majesty King George V. on 7th July, 1914. changes included the extension of the front of present buildings and the enlargement of the Cou chamber, at an approximate cost of £30,500. Sheriff's Chambers, Wilson street, form a group buildings in the Classic style, with a stately faça and a portico of the Ionic order. They contain co halls and offices for the sheriff, sheriff substitu sheriff clerk and fiscal. The General Post Office, on south side of George square, is an edifice four stor in height, in the Italian style. The Royal Exchan in The Square, is a fine structure in the Classic st with a grand portico of twelve fluted columns of Corinthian order, thirty feet high, leading to a vestibu beyond which is the great Exchange room, 130 f long and 62 feet wide, and supported by a double row columns, 19 feet high, each composed of a single sto A dome, carried on twelve Corinthian pillars, surmou the building. The great room is supplied with all leading newspapers, directories, commercial lists besides the latest home and foreign telegrams. numerous apartments above and below the Excha are appropriated to various commercial purposes. Stock Exchange, in Buchanan street and St. Geor place, opened in 1877, at a cost of over £50,000, extended in 1906, is in the early French-Gothic st from designs by the late Mr. John Burnet and his s Sir John J. Burnet LL.D., R.S.A. The Corn Exchange Hope street, is a modern structure, and the interior is veniently fitted up. The market is held every Mon Wednesday and Friday. The Merchants' House, in Ge square and West George street, erected in 1874-7, a tower 122 feet high and a frontage varying from to 98 feet. The Chamber of Commerce occupie portion of the building. The Trades' Hall, in Glass street, consists of a centre and wings, with a ru basement, four Doric columns above support entablature, and a dome, surmounted by a lant rises from the roof. The hall is 70 feet long, 35 br and 24 high, exclusive of the dome. On the walls hung portraits, and tablets recording the names of conveners from 1605 to the present time. The sal where the House meetings are held, is decorated the arms of the House and the Fourteen Incorporati and also bears inscriptions recording the names of t chief benefactors. The Trades' Hall is now the ol public building in Glasgow. The City Halls, in All street and Candleriggs, are used for all kinds of pu gatherings; the grand hall will hold about 3,000 sons; the saloon hall, 400; the mid hall, the upper and the lesser hall, each 350. St. Andrew's Public H in Granville street west, are in the Classic style, a frontage of 200 feet, designed as a central block wings, adorned with columns of the Ionic order 32 high. The upper storeys are relieved with emblemat figures representing Music, Painting, Science, Ar tecture, Poetry &c., and also bear the names of m ancient composers, painters &c. The reception r

75 by 40 feet, and 32 feet high. The large hall is feet long (including the back gallery), 72 feet wide 58 feet high, and is available for 3,500 persons at full dress concert, and 5,500 at a popular meeting. The ball room measures 80 feet by 60 feet, and the upper room 60 by 18½ feet. There are also smaller halls, holding from 50 to 1,000 persons.

BANKS.

The Bank of Scotland, erected in 1869, is a building of the Italian style, and has over its St. Vincent place entrance a ponderous entablature resting on caryatides, from the chisel of Mr. William Mossman. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited, in Ingram street, is also in the Italian style, from designs by Sir John J. Burnet LL.D., R.S.A. of Glasgow, architect, and has a frontage of 106 feet; it was erected at a cost of over £30,000, and is largely faced with polished Aberdeen granite. Surmounting the main entrance is a massive open pediment embellished with carved work, in the centre of which is a raised sculptured group, representing the figures and coat of arms engraved on the notes issued by this bank. The Clydesdale Bank Limited, on the north side of St. Vincent place, was erected in 1873, and is in the Classic style, after designs by Mr. John Burnet, and has a frontage of 134 feet. On the south side of St. Vincent place are the offices of the Scottish Provincable Life Assurance Society, erected in 1872-3, from the designs of Messrs. Campbell, Douglas and Sellars.

LITERARY, SCIENTIFIC AND PROFESSIONAL.

The Glasgow Athenæum, St. George's place, was instituted in 1847. The present buildings, opened in 1888, are well and conveniently arranged and furnished, and the institution combines the advantages of an exchange and the comforts of a club, with extensive educational departments. The reading rooms are abundantly supplied with the earliest telegraphic intelligence and the newspapers and periodicals of every kind, and the library contains upwards of 26,000 volumes. The Mitchell Library, North street, founded on a bequest of the late Stephen Mitchell esq. who died in April, 1874, is a Free Public Reference Library, and was opened 1 Nov. 1877; it now 1921) contains 250,000 volumes in all departments of literature. The library, as far as available means have permitted, has assumed a thoroughly representative character, so that students of the various branches of knowledge can now have access to an excellent selection of standard and useful works in many special subjects. In particular the library contains many works on artistic design and decoration as applied to manufactures, and special collections have been formed of books relating to Scotland, and particularly to Glasgow and the West. The "Burns' Corner" is believed to contain the largest and most valuable library of Burns and Scottish poets and philologists in existence. The "Moir Collection" now contains over 26,000 volumes, bequeathed by the late David Moir, or purchased with money left by him for the purpose. Under a bequest of the late Councillor Mann, the library acquired a complete set of the Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society, and many other works of importance. In the magazine room may be seen the current numbers of 750 selected periodicals of all classes; separate rooms are provided for students and for ladies. The library is open from 10 a.m. till 9 p.m. daily, and is managed by a committee of the Town Council. The Royal Glasgow Institute of Fine Arts holds annual exhibitions, opening in October, in the large suite of galleries at 207 Sauchiehall street, opened Feb. 3rd, 1880; Lawrence Scobie, acting sec. There are also eighteen District Libraries, including Stirling's Library. A well equipped Commercial Library, which is supplied with sets of the British, American and Colonial Specifications of Patents, also forms part of the public libraries system of the city. Each District Library comprises a lending department containing from 8,000 to 10,000 volumes, a general reading and news room, a reading room for women and a department for boys and girls. Over 3,000,000 volumes are issued annually and the number of visits exceeds 7,000,000. Hours of admission to general reading and news rooms from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and to lending departments from 12 noon to 8.30 p.m. daily, wednesdays excepted. The Kelvingrove Art Gallery and Museum, in Kelvin grove, opened in 1901, at a cost of nearly £250,000, is an edifice of red brick with stone facings, and includes a large hall, 125 by 58 feet, two side courts and 22 galleries for art exhibitions, natural history, geology, engineering and antiquities. Baillie's Institution Free Public Reference Library, 153 West Regent street, owes its existence to George Baillie, a member of the Faculty of Procurators in Glasgow, and was founded in 1863 and opened in 1887; it now (1921) contains 32,000 volumes; it is open daily, Sundays excepted, from 10 a.m. till 9 p.m. to all persons over 14 years of age.

Glasgow Corporation District Libraries.—Under the provisions of the "Glasgow Corporation (Tramways, Libraries &c.) Act, 1899," the Corporation have established 18 libraries and one reading room. Libraries have been erected and opened in Gorbals, Kingston, Anderston, Woodside, Maryhill, Kinning Park, Dennistoun, Govanhill, Springburn, Bridgeton, Parkhead, Hutchesontown, Pollokshields, Townhead, Possilpark, Cathcart, Langside and Pollokshaws, and one reading room, under a bequest of the late Mr. John Rankin, in Whitevale street. The libraries are under the management of a committee of the Town Council; convener, Councillor J. Heenan; sub-convener, Councillor D. McCowan; city librarian, S. A. Pitt; assistant city librarian, Robert Adams; superintendent of district libraries, F. Kent.

The New Club, in West George street, has a frontage of 84 feet, and is provided with every convenience for the comfort of members. The Royal Faculty of Physicians' and Surgeons' Hall is in St. Vincent street, the meeting room of the Faculty being a handsome chamber, the walls of which are hung with the portraits of past presidents. The Faculty dates from 1599, and in examination work is now associated with the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons of Edinburgh, examinations being held in Glasgow in April and July. The Faculty also co-operates with the same bodies in granting diplomas in public health, and grants separately a Fellowship and a qualification in dental surgery. The Faculty also provides apartments on their premises for the use of the greater part of the Medical Societies of Glasgow. A large medical library is maintained at the hall, and is open for purposes of consultation to the whole medical profession. The Faculty of Procurators' Hall, in St. George's place and West George street, near to St. George's church, is a large building in the Venetian Gothic style, and is designed as a library and hall for the procurators: the principal public sales of property take place in this hall on Wednesdays. The Glasgow Institute of Architects was established for the advancement of the art and science of architecture, and the consideration and discussion of all subjects and questions connected directly or indirectly with that profession. There are now about 200 members.

CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS.

The Royal Infirmary, near the Cathedral, and originally built in 1792-4, was replaced in 1912 by a new building on the same site. The new infirmary holds about 675 patients. The Western Infirmary, opened in October, 1874, at a cost of about £100,000, stands in grounds adjoining those of the University on the west. A dispensary, pathological buildings and a nurses' home were added in 1905, at a cost of about £40,000. The infirmary shares in the appointment of the Professor of Pathology.

The Eye Infirmary is at 174 Berkeley street, and 80 Charlotte street.

The Glasgow Hospital and Dispensary for Diseases of the Ear, Nose and Throat, 27 and 28 Elmbank crescent, has for its objects: to afford to the poor suffering from ear disease the best possible treatment; to provide facilities to medical students and practitioners for the study of ear disease; and to develop and advance the science and art of aural surgery.

The Garscube Cottage Hospital, in Maryhill road, Maryhill, was erected in 1876 as a memorial to the late Sir George Campbell bart. of Succoth, who died 17th Feb. 1874, and contains 10 beds.

The Lock Hospital, in Rotten row, was established in 1805.

The Royal Hospital for Sick Children, York hill, was opened in 1914 by T.M. King George and Queen Mary, and contains 270 cots; about 4,000 children are treated at the hospital annually.

Stobhill General Hospital and Infirmary is now under the control of the Government.

Hutcheson's Hospital, in Ingram street, was founded by two brothers, George and Thomas Hutcheson, between the years 1639 and 1641. The former amassed a large fortune as a writer and notary; the latter was a preacher. The present building, erected in 1803, includes a tower with octagonal spire 156 feet high. From the original endowment and subsequent benefactions, the trustees now appropriate a sum of about £12,000 per annum for the payment of pensions to aged men and women; two-fifths of the income of the hospital, which amounts to about £8,000 per annum, is paid over to the governors of the Hutcheson Educational Trust to be applied to educational purposes in the terms of the scheme constituting that trust.

The Royal Glasgow Asylum for the Blind, at 100 Castle street, founded in 1804, has for its object the education, maintenance and employment of the blind, and there are at present (1921) 230 workers and inmates engaged in the manufacture of sacks, mats, twines, ropes, baskets, bedding, brushes, wire riddles &c. and also 80 children being educated. Nearly £400 per week is disbursed to the blind in the form of wages and grants, and, where necessary, special grants are made from the charitable funds of the institution.

The Deaf and Dumb Institute is at Prospecthill road, Mount Florida.

The Eastern District Poorhouse Hospital is in Duke street.

The Western District Hospital is in Possil road.

The Lochburn Home for Girls, at Lochburn, Maryhill, will hold 120 inmates. There is a probationary home at 268 Cathedral street, for 52 inmates.

The Mossbank Industrial School, at Millerston, four miles to the east of Glasgow, is for the education of neglected and destitute boys. The foundation stone was laid 26 Aug. 1868, by the 13th Earl of Dalhousie K.T., Grand Master Mason of Scotland, assisted by the 10th Earl of Haddington and other officials of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. Externally the building is of red brick with bands and ornamental work in white and black brick, and is available for 375 boys.

The Dog and Cat Home for Glasgow and the West of Scotland is situate at Corkerhill-by-Crookston, and has an office at 28 Bath street. Its objects are the taking care of stray dogs, and so far as its limits permit, of stray cats, and the boarding and treatment of dogs and cats. There is no endowment, and the home largely depends on voluntary contributions.

The Glasgow and West of Scotland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals has its head office at 28 Bath street. The object of this society, established in 1856, is to prevent cruelty to animals by every legitimate means, and it is supported by voluntary contributions. The society operates in the city of Glasgow and the counties of Ayr, Argyll, Bute, Dumbarton, Lanark, Renfrew and Stirling.

The Royal Mental Hospital is at Gartnavel, two miles west of the city, and was built in 1843, at a cost of over £40,000.

The Poor House, at Barnhill, erected in 1853, for the extensive parish of Glasgow, was re-constructed and enlarged in 1903, and now (1921) holds 2,542 inmates.

The House of Refuge and the Night Asylum, in North Frederick street, are large and well managed institutions.

In addition to the benevolent institutions already mentioned, many others also exist in the form of mortifications and bequests.

RELIGIOUS AND MORAL SOCIETIES.

The Tract and Colportage Society of Scotland, 79 West Regent street, is intended to promote the diffusion of a healthy religious literature, especially among the humbler classes of the people, by the gratuitous distribution of tracts, and the offering by sale, by colporteurs, of Bibles and periodicals of a sound religious character at the houses of those who might not be attracted by them at the ordinary bookshops. Other societies for religious objects are also very numerous, and are liberally supported.

The Glasgow Christian Institute, established in 1879, occupies buildings in Bothwell street, five storeys in height, in a species of Romanesque style; on either side are premises, in similar style to the central block, occupied by the Young Men's Christian Association Club, established in 1897, and the Bible Training Institute, established in 1892. There are several Bible Societies and Sabbath School Societies, besides the Young Men's Christian Association, in connection with which a course of lectures is delivered every winter by eminent men. The Abstainers' Union hold concerts every Saturday evening in the City Hall during the winter season.

The Girls' Home, in Rotten row, is used as an auxiliary to the Home at Maryhill.

PLACES OF AMUSEMENT, PARKS AND GARDENS.

The Theatre Royal is in Hope street, the Royal Princess's Theatre in Main street, Gorbals, and the Metropole Theatre in Stockwell street. There are three music halls, viz., the Empire in Sauchiehall street, the Panopticon in Trongate, and the Alhambra in Wellington street.

Glasgow Green, in the south-eastern quarter of the city, covers an extent of 140 acres and is washed on the south and west by the river Clyde; the prospect towards the south-east is beautiful and extensive—wood and villas in the foreground, and the hill of Dychmont, with the loftier and more distant one of Tinto, in the distance. The grounds have been well laid out, and include a gymnasium and a house assigned to the Royal Humane Society; a portion has also been set apart for cricket and other games. The Kelvingrove or West End Park, which comprises 60 acres of ground, on both sides of the Kelvin stream, originally formed a portion of the old estates of Woodside and Kelvingrove, but was laid out in its present form from plans furnished by the late Sir Joseph Paxton kt. Here is the Glasgow Art Gallery and museum, a building of stone, comprising a central hall, with two courts, with galleries around, terminated with light pavilions. The gallery contains an extensive collection of pictures, comprising examples of the Italian, Flemish and Dutch schools, with numerous works of the British school; also natural history, ethnography, antiquities, art objects and engineering collections. The space in front of the art galleries has now (1921) been laid out as an Italian garden. Outside the museum is placed an old engine, said to be one of the first made by James Watt. The fountain in the park was erected in 1872 to commemorate the introduction of Loch Katrine water into Glasgow, and the services in connection therewith of the late Lord Provost, Robert Stewart esq. of Murdostoun; it is 40 feet high, and is surmounted by a fine bronze ideal figure of the "Lady of the Lake." Close by is a group of bronze statuary, presented to his native city by the late John S. Kennedy esq. of New York, and modelled from sketches taken in the Jardin des Plantes, Paris. There is also a statue of the late Field Marshal Earl Roberts V.C., K.G., K.P., P.C. erected in 1916. The International Exhibitions of 1888 and 1901 were held in this park, and a Scottish National Exhibition in 1911. The Queen's Park, situated to the south of the city, has a total extent of 154 acres, and was also laid out by Sir Joseph Paxton. From the flag-staff mound a beautiful prospect is obtained, slightly broken by the interposition of a clump of trees which mark the spot where the Regent Murray had his camp at the memorable battle of Langside, 13th May, 1568; in the village of Langside is a monument commemorating this battle. The pleasure ground to the east of the park was the scene of the battle, and close to it, on the main road, is Queen Mary's Cottage, in the wall of which is an inscribed stone recording the circumstances of the event. The Alexandra, or North-Eastern Park, to the north-east of Dennistoun, was formed in 1870-3; it is 85 acres in extent, and was acquired and laid out at a cost of £40,000. The Kelvinside Botanic Gardens, Great Western road, are the property of the Corporation, and include a large winter garden. In 1896 various meteorological instruments were placed here for scientific observations; the gardens are open every day till dusk.

Bellahouston Park, acquired by the Corporation of Glasgow as a public park, was opened June, 1896, when the mansion house, purchased along with the park, was adapted as an exhibition gallery, with a photographic collection as the first display. This mansion has now been demolished and the stones of which it was built formed into a rockery. The park was extended (1919) by the purchase of Ibrox Hill.

The Glasgow Skating and Curling Club are the tenants of a lake situated in Great Western road, Kelvinside, covering 6½ acres, and which, during the summer, is used for boating.

MONUMENTS.

At the back of the Cathedral is a rocky eminence called the Merchants' Park, upon the summit of which, on a fluted Doric column 58 feet high, is placed a colossal statue of the illustrious Scottish reformer, John Knox, erected here in 1825; the figure was modelled by Mr. Forrest, of Lanark, from a painting in Glasgow University, and the pedestal bears appropriate inscriptions. Near this is the statue of M'Gavin, the formidable opponent of Popery, and author of "The Protestant." There are other monuments to James Wilson, a weaver, Hardie, Baird, and likewise one to James Nisbet, James Lawson and Alexander Wood, who, in 1684, suffered for their adherence to Protestantism; this latter monument has been renewed three times, and as now standing was erected about 1860. Oppos the old Town Hall is an equestrian statue William III. presented to the city in 1736 by Jan M'Crea esq. then governor of Madras, and a native Glasgow.

The monument to Lord Nelson, on Glasgow Green, a simple obelisk, 143 feet in height, surrounded by protecting railing; the four sides of the pedestal b inscriptions recording the dates of his birth and dea and a list of his naval achievements. The fine bro equestrian statue of the Duke of Wellington, wh stands in front of the Royal Exchange, was modelled the late Baron Marochetti, and erected in 1844, a cost of £10,000. In George square, which is laid with plots of grass and flower beds, are equestr statues of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria and H.R the Prince Consort, which occupy corresponding positi inside the quadrangle. A tall pillar, surmounted by statue of Sir Walter Scott, rises between them, wi figures of Sir John Moore, Lord Clyde, Sir Robert P the late Thomas Graham (Master of the Mint, an native of Glasgow) and James Watt also adorn square. The Burns' monument, erected by public s scription, was inaugurated on the anniversary of poet's birthday, and consists of a bronze statue, 9 f in height, set on a pedestal of grey granite, the pa of which are filled with bas-reliefs, also in bronze, c tributed by towns in the west of Scotland, and form illustrations of Burns's works. Three other monume have a position in George square, viz.: those to Livingstone, the poet Campbell, and James Oswald, f member of Parliament for Glasgow after the passing the Reform Bill of 1832. Sir John Moore K.C.B. fell at Corunna, 16 Jan. 1809, in the moment of vict over a much superior French force, was a native Glasgow, where he was born 13 Nov. 1761. James W F.R.S. the eminent mechanician and engineer, was some time a working mechanician in Glasgow, and 1763 withdrew to a private room near the Broomiel during which seclusion, with a single assistant, he c menced the experiments that issued in such moment results. Henry Bell, of Helensburgh, also an ingeni and successful inventor in the department of ste locomotion, launched on the Clyde in 1812 a s steamboat of 25 tons, called the "Comet," the steamboat which plied on any water, and which pro its independence of wind and tide, realising a spee 7 miles an hour.

GLASGOW UNIVERSITY

he University of Glasgow was founded by Pope Nicolas V. on the application of William Turnbull, Roman Catholic Bishop of Glasgow, in 1450-51, and is, therefore, the second oldest among the universities of Scotland, St. Andrews alone having priority. It was established under the name then given to such institutions—studium generale—the course of study including theology, canon and civil law, the arts, and every other usual faculty. At first there were not any buildings or endowments, but students soon began to assemble to lectures in a building near the Cathedral, in a street called Rotten row. In 1460 Sir James Hamilton, 1st Lord Hamilton, made a gift to the University of a tenement and four acres of land on the north side of the Blackfriars church, comprising a portion of that hitherto occupied by the old college buildings, and to this site the teaching and residence of the members of the University were transferred in 1465. The business of the University was carried on with varied success till the time of the Reformation (1560), when the revenues were blown into utter confusion, and James Beaton, Archbishop of Glasgow, having fled before the triumphant Presbyterians, carried with him the charters, records, seal and insignia of the University, and deposited them in the Scots' College at Paris. The mace, restored to the University in 1590, is of silver-gilt, and 4 ft. 9½ in. high, and in general design resembles those of the University of St. Andrews: it has a plain shaft with three knops, and a spreading base: the head is an elaborate piece of tabernacle work in three hexagonal stages: the lowermost consists of six crocketed arches supported by buttresses, and containing figures of angels bearing shields, one of which bears an inscription: the others exhibit respectively the arms of Scotland, Glasgow, the Regent Morton, Lord Hamilton and Bishop Turnbull: the second and smaller stage is similar, but has simple floriated panels: the uppermost stage, much diminishing, resembles the others, but the sides are filled with window-like open tracery: the whole is surmounted with a pointed capping, terminating in a crocketed finial. The University was, however, restored and maintained by the public spirit of the citizens, and in 1574 renewed animation was given to its academic teaching by the advent, as Principal, of the famous Andrew Melville. His nephew reports that "there was no place in Europe comparable to Glasgow for guid letters during these years, for a plentiful and chepe learning of all kinds of languages, artes, and sciences." Chairs of Natural Philosophy, Moral Philosophy and Greek were founded in 1577, and Greek in 1561. The authority thus acquired was confirmed by the confirmation in 1577 of a charter granted by the Regent Morton, and usually known as the Nova Erectio of James VI. then in his minority. This instrument was the foundation of many of the statutes by which the University was long governed. During the Protectorate the welfare was enhanced by the attendance of many students informing students from England; but at the Restoration in 1660 it was deprived of a great portion of its resources, and three of its professorships fell into abeyance. With the Revolution of 1688 its fortunes began to gain. The chair of Mathematics, long suppressed for want of funds, was revived in 1691, and during the next thirty years another half dozen chairs were either revived or established, namely, Humanity, revived, 1706, although founded in 1637; Oriental Languages, 1709; Civil Law and Medicine, 1712; Church History, 1716; and Anatomy, 1718. A professorship of Astronomy was established in 1760; and during the last century various new chairs have been founded, viz.:—Natural History, 1807; Surgery and Midwifery, 1815; Chemistry, 1817; Botany, 1818; Materia Medica, 1831; Physiology and Forensic Medicine, 1839; Civil Engineering, 1840; Conveyancing, English Language and Literature, and Biblical Criticism, 1861; Naval Architecture, 1883; Pathology and History, 1893; Political Economy, 1896; Geology, 1904, and Mining, 1907. Previous to the "Universities Act, 1858" (21 and 22 Vict. c. 44), the business of the University was transacted in three distinct courts, namely: the Senate, the Faculty and the Comitia. Under the Act above mentioned, important changes were made in the constitution and government of the University, by which the distinction between the Faculty and the Senate was abolished, and two new bodies, the University Court and the General Council, were instituted. The Court consisted of seven members, and was empowered to review all decisions of the Senatus Academicus, to effect improvements in the internal arrangements, and to exercise other powers in the government of the University. Under the "Universities Act of 1889" the members of the University Court were increased to fourteen, namely, the Rector, the Principal, the Lord Provost of Glasgow for the time being, an assessor nominated by the Chancellor, an assessor nominated by the Rector, an assessor nominated by the Lord Provost, magistrates and Town Council of Glasgow, four assessors elected by the General Council and four elected by the Senatus Academicus. The Court is now a body corporate, in which is vested all the property belonging to the University, and various additional powers were also conferred upon it by the Act of 1889, including the administration of revenue and property; the reviewing of decisions by the Senatus; the appointment of professors to certain chairs, and of examiners for degrees; the recognition of extra-mural lecturers; the election of a representative of the University on the General Medical Council, besides many other functions. The main duty now entrusted to the Senate is the ordinary superintendence and regulation of the teaching and discipline of the University.

The General Council includes professors, members of the University Court and graduates, and holds two statutory meetings in the year. It elects the Chancellor, four members of the University Court, and in conjunction with the General Council of Aberdeen University elects a representative in Parliament. Under the Act of 1889 statutory recognition has been given to a previously existing representative Council for students.

The University buildings, situated on Gilmorehill, an eminence at the west end of Glasgow, occupy a site of nearly 4 acres, overlooking the Kelvingrove Park and the Kelvin river; they were begun in April, 1867, and on the 8th October of the following year the foundation stone was laid by His late Majesty King Edward VII. then Prince of Wales. The buildings form an oblong rectangular pile, about 600 feet in length, by nearly 300 feet wide, enclosing two quadrangles, divided by a central block, running transversely. The whole was erected from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott kt. R.A. and is in the Gothic style of the early 14th century, modified by the introduction of Scottish features and detail. The south or principal front is dominated by a lofty central tower, with ornamental parapets and projecting turrets, and surmounted by an octagonal spire of open stonework reaching a height of about 300 feet; each end of this front is raised and forms a kind of gabled wing. On the east side are the medical and science class-rooms, and projecting from these are buildings forming the chemical and anatomical laboratories. Connecting the north and south portions of the buildings is the noble Bute Hall, the gift of the late Marquis of Bute, embellished by a number of memorial stained glass windows. The northern section of the pile, besides the library, founded prior to the Reformation and containing upwards of 150,000 volumes, comprises a students' reading room and the famous Hunterian Museum. This museum was bequeathed to the college by the celebrated Dr. Hunter, of London, a native of East Kilbride, and was transferred to Glasgow in 1807. The collection contains specimens of natural history, anatomical preparations, paintings, books and medals, the latter being estimated at £30,000, and the whole collection cost Dr. Hunter £100,000. The pictures are all from the pencils of the great masters, including Titian, Guido, Domenichino, Rubens and Rembrandt. Additions to the collection are continually being made. During the period 1899-1903 the buildings were much extended, at a cost of £70,000, and further extensions were completed, at an estimated additional cost of about £100,000, and opened by T.M. King George V. and Queen Mary, then Prince and Princess of Wales, 23rd April, 1907.

Queen Margaret College, Hamilton drive, Hillhead, forms the department for women students of the University, and was established as such in session 1892-3, the first session in which women were admitted to study for degrees in the University. In 1893 the college, as a separate institution, having been dissolved, the buildings and grounds, which had cost over £15,000, and the endowment funds, amounting to £23,395 7s. 11d. were handed over to the University Court; but the name "Queen Margaret College" survives as designating the part of the University buildings and grounds which is devoted to the education of women. The classes held here now prepare for the various degrees of the University, the teaching and other matters are regulated by the University Court and Senate, and the teaching staff is appointed by the Court. The curricula, regulations and fees are those of the University, and the college students have access to the University library and museum. The medical students have also facilities for clinical work in the Royal Infirmary (where beds are reserved for clinical instruction for women students only), the Royal Hospital for Sick Children, and Glasgow Maternity Hospital; and for dispensary work in the Royal Infirmary, Royal Sick Children's Hospital and Central Dispensary.

OVAN is a town on the south bank of the Clyde, 3 miles west of Glasgow, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and on the Glasgow and Paisley joint railway. It gives its name to one of the Parliamentary divisions of Lanarkshire. It is almost one with Glasgow, there being a continuous line of houses connecting the two. It has little to invest beyond its extensive shipbuilding yards, which on the construction of iron vessels have earned a world-wide reputation. The whole parish is now entirely in Lanarkshire, as, under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), Boundary Order 140, the portion of Govan parish formerly in Renfrewshire has been transferred to Lanarkshire, and most of it incorporated in the extended city of Glasgow. The parish church, picturesquely situated near the river, was rebuilt in 1884. The Episcopal Church of St. Michael, built in 1878, will seat 600 persons; the rectory, net yearly value £300, has been held since 1919 by the Rev. Albert Edgar Pinhorne, of Edinburgh University. The Mental Hospital at Merryflatts was erected by the Govan District Board. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. Elder Park, presented to the inhabitants of Govan by Mrs. Elder, was opened in August, 1885, by the Earl of Rosebery K.T. and contains a statue of the late John Elder erected in 1888 at a cost of £2,000, and also one of the late Mrs. Elder, erected in 1906; near the Govan Cross now stands a statue of the late Sir William Pearce, M.P. Dec. 1888. The Free Library was erected in 1903, at a cost of £27,000, defrayed by the late Mrs. Elder. The burgh, in terms of the "Glasgow Boundaries Act, 1912," now forms part of the city.

KENNING PARK, in Govan parish, on the south bank of the Clyde, about 1 mile south-west of Glasgow, is a quoad sacra parish, and was created a police burgh 16th January, 1871, and under Order No. 140 of the Boundary Commissioners was transferred from Renfrewshire to Lanarkshire. The burgh is now within the city of Glasgow. The area rateable value and population are now included in those of the city.

PARTICK is a town on the north bank of the Clyde, and west of the city of Glasgow. It has a station on the North British railway, and is environed by agreeable scenery and possesses a beautiful park. There are also mills, factories, boat-building yards, and other industrial establishments. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. The burgh, in terms of the "Glasgow Boundaries Act, 1912," now forms part of the city.

POLLOKSHAWS is a town, 2½ miles south-west from Glasgow, on the road to Irvine and near to the White Cart river, in a pleasing valley sheltered by plantations, and has a station on the Caledonian and on the Glasgow and Kilmarnock joint railways. The town consists of several well-built but somewhat irregular streets. The trade of the place is considerable, there being extensive establishments for weaving and dyeing, bleach fields, paper works, iron foundries, engineering works, and establishments for the manufacture of earthenware, together furnishing employment to the greater portion of the inhabitants. Pollokshaws was erected into a burgh of barony in 1814, in favour of Sir John Maxwell bart. of Pollok, and the government of the town was then vested in a provost, one bailie, six councillors, and a treasurer, but under the "Police Act of 1892," the governing body has been abolished by the "Glasgow Boundaries Act." There is a good public library. A new Burgh Hall was built in 1890 by Sir John Stirling-Maxwell bart. M.P. at an estimated cost of between £15,000 and £20,000, from the designs of Dr. Rowand Anderson, Rutland square, Edinburgh, and has a tower with spire; the hall will hold about 800 people. There are branches here of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The parish of Eastwood is four miles in length by three in breadth, and is bounded on the north and east by Govan and Cathcart, on the south by Neilston and Mearns, and on the west by the Abbey parish of Paisley. The district is generally well cultivated, and abounds in freestone; and, besides the stream of the White Cart, is watered by the Auldhouse burn. Under the provisions of the "Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889" (52 and 53 Vict. c. 50, sections 44 to 50), the part of Eastwood parish known as Glasgow Suburban was transferred to Lanarkshire. Pollokshaws burgh, in terms of the "Glasgow Boundaries Act, 1912," now forms part of the city.

The population of Pollokshaws ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 9,567.

THORNLIEBANK is a village and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Eastwood, lying a little to the south of Pollokshaws, in a beautiful hollow, watered by the Auldhouse burn, and 5 miles south-west from Glasgow Royal Exchange. Calico printing and Turkey red dyeing are carried on here to a great extent, and the printed fabrics produced are of considerable excellence. There are two railway stations, each about half a mile from the village; Thornliebank on the Busby and East Kilbride section of the Caledonian railway and Kennishead on the Barrhead and Kilmarnock section of the Glasgow and South Western and the Caledonian joint railway. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,944.

Kennishead, half a mile distant, comprises a few private residences.

The municipal area of the city of Glasgow is 19,183 acres

The rateable value of property in the City has steadily increased. The Valuation Roll is made up annually, but for the purpose of showing the increase in rateable value it will be sufficient to take the valuation made up in 1855 (the first valuation following upon the Valuation Act, 1854), and each ten years thereafter. The figures are as follows:—

1855-6	£1,336,475
1866-7	1,825,904
1876-7	3,117,827

NEIGHBOURING BURGH AND SUBURB

UTHERGLEN, or Ruglen, as it is commonly called, is a town and ancient royal burgh, and police burgh and parish in Lanarkshire, with a station on the Caledonian railway, and is 2½ miles south-east from Glasgow and 9 west from Hamilton. The town consists of one principal street with many smaller ones branching from it; in the vicinity are collieries, and there are chemical and dye-works, several factories, a paper mill, a pottery, tube works and a shipbuilding yard, which give employment to a large number of the inhabitants. Rutherglen was erected into a royal burgh in 1126 by King David I. and under his charter the inhabitants enjoyed many privileges. After that period small craft came up the river to Rutherglen quay. The burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a Dean of Guild, and fifteen councillors. Together with Kilmarnock, Dumbarton, Port Glasgow and Renfrew it forms the Kilmarnock parliamentary district, returning one member. The place once gave the title of earl to the Hamilton family, and subsequently, by a marriage, to that of Douglas, but it became extinct on the death of William (Douglas), 3rd Earl of Ruglen and Earl of March, in 1711. The parish church, with the exception of the tower, was built in 1794; the tower, now standing detached, is a plain square structure, with a sort of belfry spire, relieved by dormers. In the old church of Rutherglen Sir John Monteith, in 1291, engaged to betray to the English his friend and companion, Sir William Wallace. The Town Hall, in Main street, erected in 1861 at a cost of nearly £14,773, is a structure of dressed freestone, with a large square tower, containing a clock with four dials. In 1876 municipal and other buildings were added at a cost of £17,000. The town has a good circulating library. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The fairs here have been noted for a great show of horses, particularly of the Lanarkshire or Clydesdale breed, esteemed the best for draught in Scotland; they are held on the first Friday after the 4th of May; first Tuesday after the 4th of June; first Friday after 25th of July; first Friday after the 25th of August; Wednesday and Friday in the first week of November, and the Friday after the 25th of November. The castle of Rutherglen (which stood near to Castle street, but of which not a trace now remains) was several times besieged during the reign of King Robert the Bruce, and it remained a place of strength until the battle of Langside, 13 May, 1568, soon after which the Regent Murray, to revenge himself on the Hamilton family, in whose custody it then was, ordered it to be destroyed. The parish of Rutherglen comprises an area of 2,258 acres; burgh, 850 acres; the population in 1901 was – parish, 20,934; burgh, 13,279; and in 1911, parish, 28,403; burgh, 24,319; rateable value, £131,397 18s. including the royal burgh.

The population of the burgh in 1901 was 16,114, and in 1911, 24,319, viz.: Castle ward, 5,537; Crosshill ward, 2,918; Gallowflat ward, 2,237; Greenhill ward, 4,961; Shawfield ward, 4,912; Stonelaw ward, 3,754.

The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 11,993, and in 1911, 15,961.

Wardlawhill and West Church are quoad sacra parishes in Rutherglen civil parish; the population of the former in 1901 was 4,328, and in 1911, 7,990; that of the latter in 1901, 3,527 and in 1911, 3,176, 60 being in Glasgow city.

SPRINGBURN, 2½ miles north, and PARKHEAD, 2 miles east, are places situated at the above distances from Glasgow, and contain factories and works of various kinds, giving employment to a large number of inhabitants.

Shettleston and Tollcross are now included within the boundaries of the city of Glasgow.

Springburn is a quoad sacra parish; population in 1901, 30,838.

BISHOPBRIGGS is a large village and suburb of Glasgow, in the parish of Cadder, 3½ miles north-east from Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and Edinburgh section of the North British railway; it is also connected with Glasgow by the electric tramway. The population of Bishopbriggs ward in 1911 was 3,071.
